1 of 2 killed in plane crash had local links

A former county resident, Rolly S. Turner, 53, Northridge, was one of two men killed Saturday when his plane crashed while he was participating in search-and-rescue maneuvers in San Luis Obispo. The cause of the crash is undetermined.

San Luis Obispo coroner's investigators said Mr. Turner and the co-pilot, John Coppersmith, 60, Los Angeles, died instantly in the crash Saturday afternoon of a World War II vintage plane near Soda Lake 55 miles east of San Luis Obispo.

Sheriff's Detective Mike Sheridan said original reports that the plane was a World War II German fighter were wrong. The aircraft was an American trainer of that era, an AT-6, painted with German colors and insignias.

Mr. Turner flew with the Condors Squadron, which is affiliated with the Civil Air Patrol (CAP) and helps in rescues.

Mr. Turner was employed throughout the county in branches of the Bank of America and was last the branch manager of the Hollywood Highland branch. He was a member of the First Christian Church, Ventura, before joining the Northridge Christian Church in 1970.

Body in surf that of Ventura boy

The body of a young man found floating in the surf off Ventura State Beach Wednesday has been identified as that of a 17-year-old Ventura High School student.

Investigators for the Ventura County Medical Examiner-Coroner's office identified the body today as that of Armando Raya, son of Mr. and Mrs. Onesimo Raya of West Ventura.

Armando was reported missing shortly after midnight June 4, when a friend told police he had disappeared from the Ventura Pier. Ventura police Detective Dave Stone said this morning he had originally investigated the case as a possible homicide, but has since become convinced that Armando's death was an accident.

"He was last seen sitting on the pilings over the rail on the pier, and there was no one around him," Stone said. "There is absolutely no indication of suicide, and we have no reason to believe that anyone pushed him off the pier."

Stone said Armando and a friend had been walking on the pier. He said Armando had gone to the end of the pier where some men were fishing for shark, and returned to the middle of the pier to tell his friends about the activity. The friends went down to watch the shark-fishing, and when they returned Armando was gone, police said.

The friends called police, but an intensive search failed to turn up any trace of Armando. The body was finally spotted by two surfers Wednesday afternoon.

An autopsy Thursday showed the cause of death was salt-water drowning. There was no indication that Armando had been injured by anyone before his death, a spokesman for the Medical Examiner-Coroner's Office said.

Names of other members of Armando's family were not immediately available. Funeral arrangements are pending.

Thomas Gould Jr.
As he looked in 1928

Thomas Gould, farmer and lawyer, dies at 95

Thomas Gould Jr., attorney and farmer, who lived almost all of his 95 years in Ventura County, died Sunday at the home he and his wife Mabel built in 1925.

Mr. Gould, although having suffered a series of strokes during the past 10 years, until this year had been in unusually good health considering his advanced age. Two days before he died, using a walker to make his way about his home, he told a friend: "You know, I think I can lick this thing and ride a horse again."

Memorial services will be Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. at the Ted Mayr Loma Vista Chapel, with the Rev. Hollis Allen of Community Presbyterian Church — of which Mr. Gould was a member and once served on its board of trustees — officiating.

He was born Dec. 12, 1885, in Caldwell, N.J. He once wrote, in an account of his life, that his grandfather "contracted California gold fever and came to Placer-ville in 1852," and in 1887 arranged for his son and family, including 18-month-old Thomas, to come to Ventura. Here, the Goulds purchased a quarter block at Crimea and Poli streets.

Young Thomas attended Ventura schools, graduating from high school in 1904, took the entrance examination for the University of Michigan law school at Ann Arbor, and graduated there in 1908. He returned to Ventura, but rather than setting up a law practice, he went into the flower seed business with his parents, in association with the Burpee Seed Co.

Mr. Gould was married in March of 1911 to Mabel Juanita Bartlett, who was born in Ventura, the daughter of pioneer jeweler Charles G. Bartlett. They had two children, Richard Bartlett Gould of Ventura, and Margaret Barbara Gould Griffin, who died in 1977.

Later he and his wife acquired property in the Mound area to grow walnuts, lemons and avocados, and there built the family home in which they lived for the balance of their lives. Its architects were Greene and Greene of Pasadena, whose dwelling designs are famous throughout the nation. It is located at 402 Lynn Drive.

Mr. Gould was by heart a farmer, but in the mid-1920s he decided also to return to the law business and established a partnership with a retired Superior Court judge, W.L. Pierce. They maintained their office in Downtown Ventura until after World War II, when both retired from practice.

Aside from his devotion to farming, Mr. Gould had a strong interest in public education and served several terms on the Ventura Board of Education, for a time as its president. It was in these years that the schools inaugurated the 6-4-4 grade plan and that the Ventura Junior College was established.

He is remembered as a tall (6-foot-4) "private man," his only fraternal affiliation being with the Ventura Elks Lodge. His hobby was raising fine horses and breeding cattle; he often confided to family and friends that his greatest desire was to have been a cowboy.

Survivors are his son, Richard B. Gould of Ventura, recently retired two-term president of the Ventura County Historical Society; three grandchildren, Richard of Menlo Park, Jean Gould Hales of Tallahassee, Fla., and Robert of Kanohe, Hawaii; and seven great-grandchildren.
