Preface

Sonoma, an Indian word signifying "Valley of the Moon", originally comprised all the vast territory lying west of the Sacramento river and north to the Oregon line.

At the first session of the legislature the state was divided into counties, and the northern line of Sonoma County was established along the fortieth parallel of latitude inland to the summit of the Mayacmas range, thence southerly to San Pablo bay. In 1859, Napa County having been formed, Mendocino County was set apart and Sonoma contracted to its present boundaries - south to San Pablo, San Francisco and Marin counties, west to the Pacific Ocean, north to Mendocino County, east to Lake and Napa counties. Its seacoast is sixty miles, its length fifty miles, its width twenty five miles and its area is eight hundred fifty thousand acres.

During its history, title to the County has been claimed by seven governments: Spain, England, France, Mexican, the Bear Flag Republic, Russia and the United States.

The original county seat was the city of Sonoma. In 1854 it was changed to Santa Rosa by the legislature. The county Archives were moved Sept. 22, 1854. A group of Santa Rosans surreptitiously loaded their buckboards with the county records during the night time hours and transported them to a place of safety until the first hall of records was built in 1859.
